

PERSONA

Humans, without knowing, have their own masks, personas

Strangely though
Regardless of having a persona, they can project their inner selves

It is pure
Like clear, running water
Let themselves go on the flow of time
Switch personas again

Between persona and true face
The outer world and the inner world
Like the moon, shining in white silver
Going back and forth slowly

Like a beautiful, fragile, pure being, showing from the inside to the outside
From attitude and gesture, one's true nature is revealed
That, is a face
That, is a body

And so, personas continue to change
Sometimes, unexpectedly, it misses its unpredictable inner selves showing up

Those who have a caring heart for others makes their own persona utterly beautiful from the inside

The piercing, glowing eyes within the persona tells all
My true self is here

Yet there comes a time when one who must veil its inner world
It behaves blindly to the essence of things, Eidos
There comes a time when one has to suppress its uncontrollable feelings

If that happens so, one gently put its persona on to protect oneself
Only the side gets damaged
Pretending not to notice the matter
Cross the River of Oblivion, Lethe
Blindly feel time switching

Appearance without a persona, reveals its usually unseen psychology Finds a woman inside of a man, and a man appears from a woman

If you force to take a persona off every corner will be surrounded by light, and it will be too bright
A sharp and deadly ray stings the eyes
Pierces through the heart
Nay, do not see through me!

That is why, soothe the wounded area gently
Be there for it
Then suddenly put a persona on
To see essence, Ousia, through persona once again

What is inside is essence
A persona is also true nature

PERSONA -Take Off The Veil-

You can cut this semi-transparent veil.
It is a metaphor for uncovering a persona.
